

A CASE STUDY

Developing Cardiovascular Programs in Health Systems

Building a Virtual Advisory Board to Help Design Healthcare Programs

CHALLENGE

Working on behalf of a medical device company, a project team reached out to GLG to source various stakeholders in healthcare to discuss ideas for cardiovascular programs at health systems. Team members were looking for feedback on potential programs they had conceptualized.

THE GLG APPROACH

GLG identified the best format for this engagement considering the client's target expert criteria. GLG secured six experts holding different titles within health systems from across the U.S. to join a three-hour virtual advisory board/co-creation session.

Impressed by the insights gained from the first advisory board, the client team asked GLG to source additional candidates for a follow-up advisory board to gain fresh feedback on its updated solution.

OUTCOME

The experts' reactions to the proposed programs informed the client's second iteration of its solution. It was pleased with both sessions and used the insights gained to improve its cardiovascular programs.
